

New Pathways, Dynamic Results!

Neuromodulation Technique (NMT) is evolving again. Those of you who have been seeing Gail since he started using NMT, know that previous changes to the protocol (like the rapid muscle testing technique) have resulted in more efficient and effective sessions.

This new evolution of NMT explores a different overall approach to the issue. Rather than asking the body 'what is causing this problem?', Gail will be asking 'what is the total energetic dynamic towards or away from resolving the problem?' The new approach goes to a deeper level to create a more complete healing. Here's an example of what this could look like. You come in to be treated for a migraine; you've had migraines for years. In the past, Gail would have asked, is this migraine a result of allergies, infectious agents, emotional issues, etc., until your body located the source. Now, he will start the treatment by asking how much the body wants to hold on to the migraine, and how much it wants to be free (of course, your conscious mind will say it wants to be free, but the subconscious often has a different agenda). From there, he will look for things like entanglements with family members, fear of living without limitation, beliefs that you don't deserve to be well or that you are irreparably damaged, beliefs that progress will only be temporary, etc. Often, locating the underlying belief will resolve the whole issue, but if not, he will go on to look for the surface source (allergies, infectious agents, emotional issues, etc) which now will resolve much faster.

As you may already be thinking, this new approach can be used in every area of your life. We are already treating ourselves and our relationship with our business and treating for our goals. Those of you familiar with the Sedona Method can see how this goes hand in hand with releasing.

We are offering the following special through the end of this year on treating goals and businesses:
